The Department of Energy, Labor & Economic Growth (DELEG) aligns all energy sector initiatives and promotes economic growth and job creation to prepare Michigan for the new energy economy—the state's greatest opportunity to create new jobs, attract new investment, and diversify its economy. Michigan's energy efforts are strengthened by DELEG's centralization of the state's job workforce, and economic development, workplace protection, and business service and regulatory competencies all under one umbrella.

The basic, guiding principles of the department include building on our strength and protecting our manufacturing base, while continuing to diversify, advancing workforce development issues and integrating training and retaining in everything we do; welcoming diversity and immigrants to our communities; and focusing on urban policy.

We will be aggressive in creating and attracting jobs. We will collaborate and participate in strategic partnerships. Our guiding principles are collaboration, inclusion, integrity, and measurable outcomes.

DELEG is a department of more than 4,000 staff members who work as a team in partnership with Michigan's families, workers, businesses, and industries to make Michigan a leader in emerging new energy industries, and a magnet state for the best the world has to offer.
